CONSERVATION

In 2004 Ol Pejeta Reserve was purchased by Fauna and Flora international, a U.K based conservation organization. The Sweetwaters Game Reserve has now been extended to encompass the entire ranching area to form the 'Ol Pejeta Conservancy.' Approximately 90,000 acres in size. This has created the largest sanctuary in East Africa for the endangered Black Rhino. The aim of the conservancy is to generate profits from wildlife tourism for re-investing into community development in the local area. Porini Rhino Camp was selected as one of the camps to help in accomplishing these goals.

Our Porini Camps are run and maintained with the conservation of the environment at the forefront. We have a written environmental policy in regards to water, land and energy , solid waste and sewage which is adhered to by the camp management . The number of tourists and visitors are being limited to retain the wild and unspoilt nature of the area and to minimize the impact on the environment.
